Kennedy and Grubb: Medical Law – Text and Materials

1989. By Ian Kennedy, LLB, LLM, Barrister, Professor of Medical Law and Ethics, King's College London, and Andrew Grubb, BA, MA, Barrister, Fellow of Fitzwilliam College, Cambridge

This important new book draws together in one accessible volume cases, statutes, articles, committee reports, reform proposals and a host of other material dealing with medical law. The extensive commentary which accompanies the "text and materials", makes this more than just a work of reference.

The authors highlight such areas as;

- * the doctor/patient relationship (using Gillick as a case study),
- * medical law in general (consent, malpractice, records, and confidence)
- * and medical law in action (contraception and conception, genetic counselling, research and experiments, mental illness, transplantation, and issues surrounding the end of life).

Subjects have been arranged in order to make this an ideal companion volume to Mason and McCall-Smith: Law and Medical Ethics.

Consent and the Incompetent Patient: Ethics, Law, and Medicine

Edited by Steven R Hirsch and John Harris

The treatment of patients who are ill or handicapped in ways that render them incapable of making autonomous decisions about how they are to be treated gives rise to two conflicting but equally valid concerns. On the one hand, vulnerable individuals should be protected from unwarranted treatment and research; on the other, they should receive the treatment they need, and research that could help such people should be vigorously pursued.

This book, which has contributions from eminent barristers, psychiatrists, and representatives of patients and of the public interest, examines the issues raised by these opposing requirements, and will be of particular importance to lawyers, psychiatrists, health care professionals, and to anyone involved in the field of medical ethics.
